Her feet gracing the petals, patterns of their flower lining her dress, and their aroma sprinkled over her soft skin, the Persian Queen wanders among the halls of her palace. In her hands rests a rose from the delicately tended gardens to which the entire empire has become envious of. Seductively sweet and admired for their blessed beauty, the blood red of the rose holds an irresistible attractiveness. For this, the flower has led the desires of many throughout all of time. For their elegance, Cleopatra bathed in them. For their allure, they were chosen as a symbol of Aphrodite. Stunningly vibrant and soft to the touch, their petals grace the Queens lips as she admires her most desired treasure. For there is no beauty like that belonging to the lovely rose.

Known throughout the world, the rose is praised for its vibrant colors, as well as its intensely floral aroma and flavor. Used as a beverage and cooking ingredient in ancient Persia, many benefits to the flowering plant have been discovered, such as helping one heal faster from a cold or boosting the immune system. It can also act as a mood enhancer, with anti-aging properties, as well as producing a calming effect on those who use it. The list continues with its possession of powerful antioxidants, as well as other benefits.

Deep Rose, an all natural lemonade with real rose extracts, offers you a pleasurable taste that will sink you into a dream of ancient Persia.

Through the foggy window of a grim citadel, stands a curiously intriguing being, whispering to them self in frighteningly excited tones. Their cloak of violet silk brushes along the vibrantly stained floor. Glorious yellows, subdued blues and ghostly whites travel in mixed patterns, streaking every inch of the being's crumbling abode. Unknowingly, they hold in their hands something of unexplainable significance. A single glistening petal. The Elderflower, worth more than a silk cloak or golden coin, is a fortune to any creature. Worshipped for more than its beauty, it holds incredible power. Mysterious cures and solutions for ills beyond compare, it is the flower of health. Slowly, the beloved petal falls into boiling water. A shining concoction, the wizard knows it has been long sought after by all in ancient Britannia. Mystifying, peculiar, utterly absurd, its value learns no bounds, and the Elderflower shall forever amaze.

An ancient flowering plant, the Elderflower is popular in much of Europe. With colors that vary from yellow to purple, it possesses a slight herby yet surprisingly sweet flavor. It has become known for its plentiful advantages, such as benefits to the skin and immune system, as well as anti-aging and anti-viral qualities. Deep Elder, an all-natural lemonade with real Elderflower extracts, will give you a pleasurable taste capable of sinking you into a dream of ancient Britannia.

Sword in hand, the Master duels a fellow noble. There, wandering in the depths of the boundless forests of Germania, are two men and their steeds. Depleted of their energy, they sit under the luscious greens and browns of this wondrous forest. Dominating pines and wild oaks fight through mangled branches as they race each other to the sky. Despite the power of these incredible structures, the most intriguing creation that Nature has chosen to place in this forest, is something rather unforeseen. A hidden treasure, the Woodruff clover sits in a shady corner, hidden from simple onlookers. The German Master calls it Waldmeister, or “Master of the Forest”. With no overstatement to the name, it serves as a glimpse into the unforgettable essence of the strikingly sweet flavor. The Master lifts the clover to his scarred lips, blissfully embracing the untamed sensations with which his body is immediately taken over. Without hesitation, he accepts this gift of nature. The unforgettably captivating clover, with its generosity in taste, beauty, and scent, is an offering from the forest. Take it.

As we call it in English, Woodruff is also known as the “Goetterspeise” or meal of the gods. It is a flowering plant native to much of Europe. Painted with strong whites to faded yellows, its notoriously sweet scent is owed to the odiferous agent coumarin. Deep Wood is an all-natural Woodruff flavored lemonade that has recreated the sweet earthy aroma and taste to which Woodruff has become known for. Its pleasurable taste will sink you into a dream of ancient Germania.
